Discipline Over Motivation

How to keep going when you don't feel like it — a no-nonsense workbook

Before you begin

Motivation is great when it turns up. The problem is that it turns up when it likes, and rarely on a cold Monday morning.

Discipline is what carries you in between. Not punishing yourself, not white-knuckle willpower, but a set of decisions made in advance so that doing the thing does not depend on how you feel.

This workbook is short and direct. Read it, write your non-negotiables, and track them for thirty days.

- Read one chapter at a time. They are short on purpose.
- Do each exercise in writing — on the page, not in your head.
- Use the trackers and planner pages at the back every day.
- Print it at home, or open it in a tablet app that lets you write on PDFs.

Motivation is a visitor

Motivation spikes at the start of things — a new year, a new plan, a new notebook — and then fades. That fade is not failure. It is how motivation works.

If your plan requires feeling motivated, it will fail on schedule. A plan built on routine and commitment keeps going when the feeling leaves.

Enjoy motivation when it visits. Just never build the house on it.

- Motivation fades by design.
- Build plans that work without it.
- Use motivated days to set up easier future days.

EXERCISE · THE FADE PATTERN

Think about a goal you dropped. When did motivation fade, and what did you have in place (or not) for when it did?
