

WORKBOOK

Beat Procrastination

The two-minute start system for getting important things done — without waiting to feel ready

Before you begin

If procrastination were simply laziness, you would not feel so bad about it. Lazy people do not lie awake thinking about the email they did not send.

Procrastination is mostly about feelings. A task looks boring, confusing, or risky, and putting it off gives instant relief from that feeling. The relief is real — and so is the bill, which arrives later with interest.

This workbook will not ask you to become a different person. It gives you a system that makes starting easier than avoiding. Read a chapter, do the exercise, and use the planner pages the very next day.

- Read one chapter at a time. They are short on purpose.
- Do each exercise in writing — on the page, not in your head.
- Use the trackers and planner pages at the back every day.
- Print it at home, or open it in a tablet app that lets you write on PDFs.

CONTENTS

What's inside

Chapter 1	Why you procrastinate
Chapter 2	Make the first step ridiculous
Chapter 3	Decide when and where
Chapter 4	Design your space against distraction
Chapter 5	Work in sprints
Chapter 6	Stop waiting for perfect
Chapter 7	Plan tomorrow tonight
Chapter 8	Forgive the slip
Planner	This week's top three, every day
Log	Focus sprint log
Review	End-of-week review

Why you procrastinate

Most delayed tasks share something: they trigger an uncomfortable feeling. Maybe you do not know where to start. Maybe it is dull. Maybe doing it badly would say something about you that you do not want to hear.

Avoiding the task removes the feeling immediately. Your brain notices that and learns it: avoid, feel better. That is why procrastination is so stubborn — it works, briefly.

So the fix is not more guilt. Guilt is just another bad feeling to avoid. The fix is to make starting feel smaller, clearer and safer than putting it off.

- Procrastination is short-term mood repair, not a character flaw.
- Name the feeling a task gives you: bored, confused, anxious?
- Guilt makes it worse. Clarity and smallness make it better.

EXERCISE · NAME THE FEELING

List three tasks you have been avoiding. Next to each, write the feeling it gives you when you think about starting.

FREE SAMPLE

That's the end of the sample

The full Beat Procrastination is 15 pages. Here is everything inside it:

- Chapter 1: Why you procrastinate
- Chapter 2: Make the first step ridiculous
- Chapter 3: Decide when and where
- Chapter 4: Design your space against distraction
- Chapter 5: Work in sprints
- Chapter 6: Stop waiting for perfect
- Chapter 7: Plan tomorrow tonight
- Chapter 8: Forgive the slip
- This week's top three, every day
- Focus sprint log
- End-of-week review

Get the full PDF — $9